Grammar musicians pay tribute to fallen soldiers

Sunshine Coast Grammar School musicians will play a special part in ANZAC day celebrations in remembrance of those who had bravely fallen before them on Monday, April 25.

The Grammar Chorale and trumpeter James Morgan will participate in the Mooloolaba Dawn Service in front of the Mooloolaba Surf Lifesaving Club, which is set to be one of the biggest yet with an influx of visitors for the Australian Surf Lifesaving Titles.

There will also be a strong sense of community as more than 300 Sunshine Coast Grammar students, staff and parents gather together to march as part of the Buderim ANZAC Day celebrations while the School's Senior Concert Band will also perform at the Buderim March.

Principal at Sunshine Coast Grammar School, Mrs Maria Woods is proud to continue the school's support of these significant celebrations.

“It's inspiring to see our students taking part in these events with such pride and showing their support for this memorable and historic event by paying their respects to those who have fallen before them,” said Mrs Woods.

“We look forward to hearing our musicians perform, last year they provided a wonderful atmosphere and entertainment for spectators and visitors as they marched through Buderim’s main street.”
